The 2-week global studio “Planning the Inclusive City: Bogotá in Comparative Perspective” in Bogotá will provide students with a hands-on learning experience about inclusive urban planning in Colombia's capital. The studio will be hosted by the University of the Andes in Bogotá, Colombia's top university, in collaboration with the University of Amsterdam (Netherlands) and the University of Toronto, Scarborough (Canada) during June 9-20, 2025. This summer course will provide students with an interdisciplinary and experiential perspective on how to plan inclusive cities. With Bogotá as our classroom, participants will engage with real-world problems by studying the controversial implementation of inclusive planning initiatives regarding care infrastructure, accessibility and sustainable mobility, local economic development, and urban governance.
